COUNTIANS MAY SEEK LOANS ON '38 WHEAT CROP

Application Blanks Sent To A.A.A. Offices; 70 Cents Bushel Provided

MUST BE COOPERATORS

Aug. 31 Fixed As Deadline For Insurance On 1939 Harvest

Officials of the Pickaway county A.A.A. are ready to receive applications for loans on the 1938 wheat crop.

Application blanks for the loans arrived Saturday. Paul Mattheas, secretary of the county committee, estimated that loan cash would be received in from 10 days to two weeks after applications were filed.

Pickaway county farmers will be loaned 70 cents a bushel on No. 2 Red wheat providing it is stored in approved granaries and contains not over 13 percent moisture.

Farmers to be eligible for loans must be cooperators in the 1938 farm program to such an extent that their total soil depleting crops are within 105 percent of the total soil depleting crop allotment for their farms.

Loans Expire May 31 The loans are made at four percent interest. They expire next May 31.

Farmers interested in obtaining loans are requested to contact the A.A.A. office in the Farm Bureau home, E. Main street.

The announcement of the arrival of the loan applications was followed by a warning to farmers that midnight, Aug. 31, is the deadline for obtaining insurance on wheat to be harvested in 1939.

3,500 Acres Covered To date about 100 applications have been received covering approximately 3,500 acres. Rates for the county average 1.3 bushels for 75 percent coverage on the crop average of the last 10 years.

Hugh F. Solt is crop insurance supervisor for Pickaway county. He explained that applications may be signed up to Aug. 31 but if possible they should be completed before the final date. They may be filed in the office of the Agricultural Conservation Committee, in the Farm Bureau home.

McDonald, husband of Mrs. Krueger's maid, was charged with seriously wounding Mrs. Krueger as scores of terrified onlookers fled from the busy Los Angeles intersection where the shooting occurred.

Happeny Boy, 5, Struck By Service Chief's Auto

Junior Happeny, 5, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Happeny, S. Scioto street, escaped with bruises about 6:30 p. m. Saturday when he was bumped by a car driven on Scioto street by L. E. Miller, city service director.

Mr. Miller said the child ran in front of his car and was struck by a fender. The accident occurred between Mill and Corwin streets. Mr. Miller took the child to the office of Dr. E. L. Montgomery for an examination.

Autos driven by Henry Bart Van Horn, 332 Rhodes avenue, Columbus, and Albert V. Post, Glouster Route 1, were damaged in a collision on Route 56 about nine miles east of Circleville at 10:30 p. m. Sunday. The left front sides of the cars were damaged. No one was hurt. Deputy Sheriff Earl Weaver investigated the accident.

GONGWER FIGHTS RAY MILLER FOR COMMITTEE JOB

CLEVELAND, Aug. 22—(UP)—Fight for control of the powerful Cuyahoga County Democratic organization continued here today after a week-end of bitterness engendered by a riotous convention Saturday.

Ray T. Miller, elected after veteran county chairman Burr Gongwer left the platform, contended his selection was legal and said his committee would proceed by law to organize and prepare for the Fall campaign.

Meanwhile the Gongwer faction charged the convention proceedings were illegal and said they would hold the property and personal effects of the county organization.

Some solution to the tangled situation may be worked out at Columbus tomorrow and Wednesday when state candidates and central committeemen meet with Charles Sawyer, the Democratic gubernatorial nominee.

SLOVAKS, THREE MILLION STRONG, ASK AUTONOMY

Party May Join Forces With Sudeten Germans To Win Concessions

RUNCIMAN IS BALKED

British Mediator Unable To Make Headway In Negotiations

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, Aug. 22—(UP)—The Slovak People's party, governing body of Czechoslovakia's 3,000,000 Slovaks, renewed its campaign for autonomy today by intimating that it would join forces with the Sudeten German minority.

The party chose the occasion of the funeral of its leader of 40 years, Monsignor Andreas Hlinka, who was buried at Medieval Ruzomberok yesterday in the presence of thousands, including Premier Milan Hodza, his political enemy.

Karol Sidor, generally regarded as successor to Father Hlinka, asserted that the Slovaks would turn to the radical side. He intimated that the government's present attitude may force them to join with the Sudeten Germans and other minority groups in their campaign for greater recognition.

Demands To Go On "We will not alter Father Hlinka's program of demands, including autonomy for Slovakia, a Slovak parliament and a Slovak president," he said.

Discussing collaboration with the Sudeten Germans and other minorities, Sidor said: "The Czech government is extremely short-sighted. It is discussing with all minorities at one time instead of dealing with them separately. This common grievance may compel us to join forces with the other minorities for mutual self-protection."

Poland was officially represented by Casimir Papee, minister to Czechoslovakia; W. Laciniski, the Polish consul at Bratislava, and Lieut. Col. Noel, military attache. Four hundred Polish private citizens attended and several thousand Polish peasants were reported to have been turned back at the border, because they had no passports.

Although no official reason was given for Poland's large representation authoritative quarters said it was to show Poland's approval of Father Hlinka's fight against the Czechoslovak-Russian alliance.

Premier Hodza spoke briefly without touching on politics. He exhorted his hearers to work for the good of Slovakia and the Czechoslovak republic.

Confabs at Standstill

The negotiations between the government and the various minority groups, meanwhile, were at a standstill and the burden of trying to find some new basis for discussions fell on Viscount Runciman, British "adviser" in the dispute. Lord and Lady Runciman were due here today from the castle of Prince Adolf Von Schwarzenberg near Krumau, where they spent the week-end.

SOUTH INDIAN RAILROAD WRECK TOLL REACHES 110

MADRAS, India, Aug. 22—(UP)—Additional deaths today from South India's worst railroad accident brought the total number of dead to around 110.

A passenger train, crowded with religious pilgrims, rolled down an embankment near Trinchnopoly, on the Cavary river, 30 miles west of Tanjore, early Sunday after a cloudburst had washed away the tracks.

Survivors of the disaster said that 25 of the dead were members of a wedding party.

SHARK'S STOMACH MAY DISCLOSE IDENTITY OF MAN, FEARED MURDERED

MIAMI, Fla., Aug. 22—(UP)—Investigators hoped today that fingerprints made from a man's hand found in the stomach of a shark would lead to identification of the victim.

City, county and federal officers, joining in the investigation, considered the possibility the man was a murder victim originally because his arm was found in a sand shark which ordinarily will not attack human beings.

The arm appeared to have been severed half-way between the elbow and the shoulder before it was swallowed by the shark.

The arm apparently was from a sandy-haired man. It had a piece of rope tied around the wrist and forearm. Investigators believed, because of the fair state of preservation, they would be able to take fingerprints.

The discovery was made by Whitney Paulsen, a professional fisherman who caught the 10-foot shark in the Gulf stream East of here. The fisherman estimated the arm had been in the shark about two days.

Well-cared-for fingernails indicated the arm did not belong to a laborer.

DEWEY LINKING HINES, JUDGE WHO AIDED LOTTERY

NEW YORK, Aug. 22—(UP)—District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, entering the most critical phase of his fight in supreme court to prove that James J. Hines made a bargain with the late Dutch Schultz to protect the $100,000,000 Harlem policy racket, sought today to link the Tammany district leader directly to magistrates who freed lottery offenders arrested in police raids.

He called back to the stand Alexander Pompez, middle-aged West Indian Negro policy "banker," who in 1931 was forced to turn over control of his bank to the Schultz gang—"or else."

From Pompez he sought testimony supporting his charge that Hines, in return for a salary of $500 to $1,000 a week, used his political influence to obtain dismissals of cases against policy employees.

Pomez, bitter over the loss of his policy business to "the combination," testified last week that Schultz lieutenants repeatedly took money out of his bank for "the campaign" of 1933 in which William C. Dodge, with Hines' support, was elected district attorney. The biggest single "touch," he said was $10,000.

ITALY TO OUST ALL JEWS FROM TEACHING CORPS

ROME, Aug. 22—(UP)—Principals of public grade and high schools throughout Italy have been ordered to drop all Jewish teachers except in "special cases" approved personally by Giuseppe Bottai, minister of education, it was learned reliably today.

The order means that Jewish pedagogues will be almost entirely eliminated from all public schools, effective Oct. 1, when the new school year begins, because all appointments must be renewed annually before the beginning of the school year.

In future, all candidates seeking jobs must present certificates that they are not Jewish. Exceptions will be granted by Bottai only in cases where the applicant or his family possesses "particular national merit."

TYDINGS FLAYS ROOSEVELT FOR INVADING STATE

Senator, Branded As New Deal foe, Claims F. D. "Carpet-Bagging"

LEWIS ANSWERS CHARGES

President May Speak In Baltimore Labor Day Despite Defy

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 22—(UP)—Sen. Millard E. Tydings, D. Md., denounced by President Roosevelt as a "betrayer" of the New Deal, today placed his campaign for renomination on a frankly, anti-New Deal plane.

Promising to fight what he charged was an "invasion" of states' rights by the President, he virtually defied him to "invade Maryland in person," and said that that state "will not permit her star in the flag to be 'purged' from the constellation of the states."

In his first reply to Mr. Roosevelt's press conference announcement of his opposition to Tydings' renomination, the wealthy, senior senator from Maryland accused the president of "carpet-bagging," described his opponent, Rep. David J. Lewis, as a "100 percent rubber stamp candidate;" charged that small, Maryland officeholders are being "intimidated and terrorized."

Foe Responds

Three hours after he had spoken over a state-wide radio network last night, Lewis answered. To Tydings' comparison of Mr. Roosevelt's tactics with those of the reconstruction era, Lewis retorted that his opponent had "treated the President like a carpet-bagger;" that he "has allowed

AMERICANS MAY SEEK TO BREAK J A P BLOCKADE

SHANGHAI, Aug. 22—(UP)—The United States gunboat Oahu steamed up the Yangtze river for an unannounced destination today as American and other foreign officials deliberated whether to try to break a Japanese blockade of the great water highway.

The Japanese blockade has been maintained against foreign vessels on the grounds that the China war made the river unsafe, but Japanese vessels have moved freely up and down.

The United States naval commander in the Far East, Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, recently was refused permission for the Oahu to go to the relief of the U.S.S. Monocacy, which has been isolated in the Kiukiang sector and is short of fuel. The Monocacy also was refused permission to come downstream.

Whether the Americans decide to try to break the blockade may depend on the Oahu's trip.

SOLON THANKS AVIATOR FOR PREVENTING CRASH

JUNEAU, Alaska, Aug. 22—(UP)—Sen. Robert R. Reynolds, D. N. C., today credited the quick action of an airplane pilot with preventing a plane in which he was a passenger from crashing in the rugged country between Juneau and Anchorage.

Reynolds said he and a party of friends were en route to Anchorage when the gas line in the plane broke. The pilot headed the crippled ship back to Juneau where he landed safely, despite the loss of almost all of the fuel and faulty motor action.

At Juneau, the pilot repaired the broken line and the party returned to Anchorage, battling 70 mile an hour headwinds. Reynolds planned to leave for the United States today.

Verdict of suicide by hanging was returned Sunday by Coroner C. E. Bowers in the death of George Earl (Lefty) Lane, 51, found about 10:30 a. m. in a woodshed at his home, 435 Half avenue.

Mr. Lane had been in poor health for some time. For several days he had refused to eat, relatives said. Mr. Lane had lived alone for the last year after the death of his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Lane.

He was the son of George W. and Elizabeth Binkley Lane. His wife, Anna Trone Lane, died 22 years ago.

Mr. Lane's body was found by Mrs. Orin Baker, a sister-in-law, who lived next door. Mrs. Baker went to the home when she failed to see Mr. Lane earlier Sunday. Dr. Bowers said the condition of the body indicated that Mr. Lane had taken his life sometime Saturday night.

Funeral arrangements in charge of M. S. Rinehart have not been completed. The son plans to return from California for the funeral.

Mr. Lane played baseball in Circleville many years ago and was given the nickname (Lefty.)

DIES COMMITTEE HEARS STORY OF EX-COMMUNIST

Matthews Claims "Nucleus" For Revolution Formed In New England

HARRY BRIDGES HIT

C. I. O. Leader In Charge Of Shipping Tie-up On West Coast

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—(UP)—James B. Matthews, a former Communist organizer, told the house committee investigating un-American activities today that Communists are prepared to sabotage key industries in case the United States becomes involved in imperialistic war.

Matthews testified he was informed by a Communist leader that Communist "revolutionary nucleus" has been established in Connecticut submarine plants. He said he also was informed that Harry Bridges, C. I. O. leader on the West coast, would be able to paralyze Pacific shipping in the event of war.

Matthews launched into a description of Communist sabotage plans after asserting that New Deal and Communist objectives coincide in many respects. He testified that Communists are supporting President Roosevelt's drive against conservative Democratic party leaders.

Henderson Authority

His informant on preparations for wartime sabotage, Matthews said, was Donald Henderson, former faculty member at Columbia university.

"He assured me that the Communists already had several strategic men in important plants and industries where they would be in a position to sabotage vital processing in the event of war—just in case United States should become involved in a war against the Soviet Union," Matthews said.

"In this connection, Henderson was especially boastful of a revolutionary nucleus in submarine plants in Connecticut and of the

SURGEON TAKES BONE CHIP FROM HUBBELL'S ARM

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 22—(UP)—A loose bone chip that has handicapped the pitching of Carl Hubbell was removed from the elbow of the New York Giant hurler's left arm today.

Dr. J. Spencer Speed, bone specialist who performed the operation said it should end the pain which Hubbell has suffered during games he pitched during the last two months.

Dr. Speed refused to speculate on whether Hubbell would be able to pitch again this season. The pitcher probably will remain at the Dr. Willis C. Campbell clinic for a week, the surgeon said.

A bulletin issued at the hospital after the operation said:

"The operation was successful and the loose body was removed. The patient is doing nicely." Hubbell had been bothered by a sharp pain in the elbow of his pitching arm for several weeks but he did not mention it to Manager Bill Terry until he was driven from the box by the Brooklyn Dodgers at the Polo grounds last Thursday.

FRANCO TURNS DOWN FOREIGN ARMY REMOVAL

Nationalist Chief's Action Makes Spain Danger Point In Europe Again

RELATIONS ARE STRAINED

French Clamor For Opening Of Border To Permit Loyalist Aid

LONDON, Aug. 22 — (UP) — Spain resumed its place at the top of the diplomatic danger list today. Hope of removing foreign "volunteers" from the civil war had all but vanished and it appeared that British and French relations with Italy were about to enter a period of serious tension.

Analysis by the British and French foreign offices of a Spanish Nationalist note on the international plan to evacuate foreign troops from the war showed that the Nationalists had rejected almost all its proposals of any importance. This, apparently, meant the death of the plan. But further, as seen in diplomatic quarters, it meant that the non-intervention nations now faced the problem of preventing a period of open intervention in what is called, "The Little World War," and the consequent danger of a general conflict.

Open Border Sought

Even before the French foreign office had completed its study of the Nationalist note, the French Socialist and Communist parties, comprising the greater part of Premier Edouard Daladier's chamber of deputies majority, clamored for the opening of the Spanish frontier so that the Loyalists could get arms through France.

Any such move by the French government would cause a most serious crisis in French-Italian relations.

Even without the reopening of the frontier, the British-Italian friendship treaty was deadlocked indefinitely, because it is hinged as to its effectiveness on the withdrawal of a substantial number of Italian volunteers from the civil war.

If anything more were necessary to complete a most forbidding diplomatic picture, it was the fact that the Spanish Loyalist destroyer Jose Luis Diaz, completely refitted in French shipyards, left Le Havre Saturday night for the open sea, with a picked crew sent from Barcelona through France. The mere fact that it was refitted in France angered the Spanish Nationalists. Anger would turn to rage if it sank any Nationalist ships.

Generalissimo Francisco Franco, the Nationalist commander in chief, tacitly rejected the "volunteer" note by offering complicated counter suggestions and "improvements" to every point.

Withdrawal Demanded

The international withdrawal plan proposed that the Nationalists receive limited rights as a belligerent after "substantial progress" in evacuation of foreign troops. The definition of "substantial progress" was that 10,000 troops must have been withdrawn from the army which had the smallest number of foreigners in its ranks, and a proportionately larger number from the other side.

Idaho Man, Defeated In Primary, Sees Roosevelt

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Aug. 22.—(UP)—President Roosevelt today re-entered the western political field. The chief executive, who in the last week denounced Senator Millard Tydings of Maryland and Rep. John O'Connor of New York as New Deal "betrayers," turned his attention to Idaho where Senator James P. Pope, an ardent New Dealer, recently was defeated for renomination in the Democratic primary, allegedly by Republican votes.

Whether Idaho will furnish another test of the New Deal hinges on the decision of Pope to run in the general election as an independent.

Should he decide to run he would oppose Rep. D. Worth Clark, Democrat, who defeated him in the primary on a platform that he would not be "a Roosevelt yes man."

Theatres

AT THE CLIFTONA

Hollywood's newest axiom that "the story tells the tale at the box-office" is being extended to those hitherto haphazard, intentionally vague movie musical shows.

Just as vaudeville has all but vanished from the land, Paramount executives believe the type film entertainment known as the musical "variety show" is doomed to an eclipse that will be immediate, if not permanent. And out of this conviction has been born a distinctly new type of musical film, with George K. Arthur, Paramount producer, pioneering the way with "Cocoanut Grove," a gay musical romance revolving about the most famous night club in the world.

The new film, which comes to the screen of the Cliftona Theatre tonight and Tuesday, is a comedy studded with tuneful numbers by Harry Owens, whose "Sweet Lullaby" won the Motion Picture Academy award last year.

With the exception of Eve Arden and George Walcott, every single member of the large cast of the picture is a former musician, including the two stars, Fred MacMurray and Harriet Hilliard, as well as the Yacht Club Boys, Ben Blue and Rufe Davis. Even seven-year-old Billy Lee plays the drums and traps in the film.

But here's the difference that marks the commencement of a new trend.

Every song that is sung or played in the picture is what the movie scenarists call a "story point." Each musical number not only fits in logically at its appointed spot, but each one makes some definite contribution to the plot.

AT THE GRAND

Most pictures which come to the local theatres boast two or three stars at the head of their cast, but the feature presentation at the Grand entitled "Gold Is Where You Find It" has gone overboard with a roster which includes six outstanding players.

A Warner Bros.-Cosmopolitan production in lifelike Technicolor, "Gold Is Where You Find It" co-stars Olivia de Havilland and George Brent in the romantic leads. As if this were not enough, they are supported by such outstanding actors as Claude Rains, John Litel, Margaret Lindsay, Barton MacLane, Tim Holt (son of Jack Holt) and Marcia Ralston.

Politics and lawsuits are conducted on the same plan; advocates on both sides claim everything and concede nothing.

Miss Lois Marcy of Williamsport, has returned home from a trip to Portland, Oregon, and California.

Miss Carolyn Bochar entertained the members of her Sunday School Class of the M. E. church at a picnic at her home, Wednesday evening, August 17th. The guests were Joseph and George Black of Chillicothe, and Mrs. Russell Wardell and son, Bobby.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard L. Sams spent the week-end in Georgetown, Ohio, with Mrs. Sams' mother, Mrs. Meade E. Sams.

New Comedy Team Formed

Langdon and Hardy Perform Together

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 22.—(UP)—Harry Langdon, the meek little guy who used to get $7,500 a week for looking funny in the movies, only to lose his place because he thought he knew too much, went back to work today a sadder, wiser man.

"I thought I was smart," he said, "but I was a fool—and I paid for it with 10 solid years of staying on the ragged edge. Now I'm in the big-time again. I'm not going to make any more mistakes if I can help it."

Langdon's story, as he told it at the Hal Roach studios where he is co-starring in a series of pictures which are among Hollywood's biggest money-makers, is amazing—and more amazing to Langdon—than to anyone else.

Two months ago he was in domestic relations court telling the judge that he was down to his last $15 and couldn't possibly continue his alimony payments to his second wife. He tried to get a job, any old kind of job, and had no luck whatever.

Aided by Laurel

"Then Stan Laurel talked Hal Roach into giving me a spot as a gag man on the Laurel and Hardy comedies," Langdon said. "I got the job only a month or so ago and my salary was peanuts, but I was mighty happy about it anyway. Then Stan got into his trouble, failed to show up at the studio when they wanted him, and they gave me his job. I'm co-starring with Oliver Hardy. I'm at the top and I give the credit, every bit of it, to Stan."

"I went to the top myself years ago, made a mess of things and faded out of the business. I hope Stan isn't following in my footsteps. I really mean that, but the irony of the situation is one that keeps me awake nights, wondering."

Laurel has been in almost constant attendance in court during the last year, with wife trouble. He has married, separated from, and re-married his third wife, Ilana, so frequently that Hollywood has lost count.

"I'd been in vaudeville for years," Langdon said, "and in 1920 I took a film test. 'By 1927 I was producing my own pictures and I was running around with a stockbroker. He lived in swell style. I envied him. Finished in 1927."

"I cut down on my budgets, played the stock market and in 1927 I turned out two of the lushest pictures ever made. They were terrible. And they finished Harry Langdon as a movie star."

"It wasn't long before I lost all my money. My wife left me and there I was broke, after earning a literal fortune."

"And I got married again to a girl who loved me for myself, and not for my money. I knew she did, because I didn't have any money."

WHEAT MARKET FUTURE HINGES ON MANY FACTS

CROP'S PRICE IMPORTANT

Loans, Quotas, Weather And War To Have Affects
On 1939 Outlook

Improvement in wheat prices in the coming year depend on a decrease in planted acreage, severe winterkilling, drought, wheat loans, marketing quotas, substantial improvement in industrial conditions, or a real war. Floyd DeLashmutt, specialist in farm management at Ohio State university, asks Ohioans to look over that list of possibilities and then name the one or ones that can be controlled by the farmers themselves. He says there is good prospect that industry will continue on the upgrade but it is doubtful if larger payrolls can cope with the present supply of wheat.

Neither farmer nor industrialist can accurately predict winter temperatures or summer rainfall. Their effect on the wheat market may as well be discounted because no one knows what weather conditions will be. Planting plans must be made without considering the unpredictable.

Demand Must Be Created

The world is torn now by rebellions, undeclared wars, skirmishes, incidents, and border raids. To affect wheat prices, war would have to involve armies large enough to affect the production of wheat and to create major demands for wheat products.

The only other possibilities are wheat loans, marketing quotas, and reductions of plantings. Wheat loans now are available and will tend to stabilize prices at the loan level. This provides a bottom for the wheat market but most farmers are not as much interested in the bottom of a market as in the top. Marketing quotas can be put in effect next year if 65 percent of the farmers in commercial producing areas vote favorably but that relief is some distance away.

Mr. DeLashmutt thinks that if Ohio farmers really understand the condition of the wheat market and the present supply they will use the one method of changing conditions that is under their own control. That is the reduction of wheat planting in the approaching seeding season.

Much Carried Over

Farmers in the United States sold wheat at an average price of 46 cents a bushel the last year that wheat supplies were similar to the ones in sight now. The country carried over 200 million bushels of 1937 wheat and harvested 956 million bushels in 1938. The nation uses about 700 million bushels of wheat a year.

A sufficient carryover of wheat is 125 million bushels, but this year there will be at least 350 million bushels, and that is allowing a liberal amount for export. The amount of wheat fed to livestock will not be increased much because there are liberal supplies of feed grains, and pasture conditions are better than usual.

ODDITIES OF THE WORLD

Scouting is becoming increasingly popular among older boys. Census figures of the Boy Scouts in Great Britain and Ireland show that there are now 109,219 active Boy Scouts over 14.

Total average roll in London elementary schools has fallen from 638,823 in 1927-28 to 479,974 in 1936-37, a decrease of 158,849. Migration to housing estates outside the county is the chief cause.

A very curious nest is made by the tailor bird—an East Indian bird of the warbler family. To escape snakes and monkeys, this bird takes a dead leaf, flies up into a tree, and with a fiber for a thread, and its bill for a needle, sews the leaf to a green one hanging from the tree. The sides are sewn up, an opening to the nest thus formed being left at the top. The leaf, apparently hanging down from a twig, would never be taken for a nest.

Jerome Peters Observes 90th Birthday, Monday

By S. D. FRIDLEY
Ashville, Phone 79

And in this "out and around" drive we called on our past master school teacher, Jerome Peters, who was ninety years young Monday—August 22. He gets about well without a cane, has full use of all his senses and keeps abreast of current news including politics. He resides at St. Paul, in Madison township and it is needless to say he is a Democrat. Showed us the old school register he kept when in 1871-2 he taught in District Five, of Madison, the best one of them all and we know this for a fact. He had fifty pupils enrolled and of these, there were 27 boys and 23 girls. And along with Mr. Peters there are 9 boys and 8 girls of that fifty yet living. Who are they? The boys: Seymour Smith, Edward Hines, Henry Stump, John Curry, McClede Bales, Charles Trone, John Trone, Irvin Loffer, Steve Fridley. The girls: Clara Hines Denman, Ella Hines, Ida Hines Julian, Alma Hines, Ida Stump Long, Ketura Smith Nothstine, Mary Brobst Decker, Jane Loffer.

When Mrs. Bowers and her two school-teacher daughters moved across the street into the Charlie Brinker dwelling that started 'em on the move and they are yet at it, not everybody, but a lot. School-teacher Smith is to occupy this vacancy coming from the "Maw" Snyder home on West Main street and Bill Fortner, so they say, and his wife are to run the place at Snyder's, leaving some good empty space over Hooks. But this is not all. Julia Weaver has purchased the vacant Staley dwelling by the Methodist church and will move there from across the street near the U. B. church and Harry Sark and wife will come here from the Ralph Cloud dwelling on North East street and Ralph and family will move in soon as the Sarks get out and that leaves a vacant space where Clouds left and here's where the real news comes in, newly-weds are coming here. Hasn't happened yet, but soon. So here the moving to date—maybe.

Among the amusements on the program at the recent Fish Fry at Hopewell up along Pickaway-Franklin county line, was old time horseshoe pitching which seems to be coming back into style again as a sport. There were fourteen youngster contestants in the order of winners were Frances Peters, 1st; Arthur Flowers, 2; Neal Brown, 3.

With the favorable growing season, big corn and vegetable growing has flourished and most every day or two a new big something in this line bobs up for honors. Ben Morrison, in so far as has been reported to date, has the lead in large tomatoes, the three shown averaging near 2½ pounds. Had no special name for them, but thought the original seed came from somewhere in Europe.

Made a rather good-sized drive "out and around" Saturday just to see how crops are "showing up" and what chance there might be for the cutting of a few hundred shocks of corn a little later on when fit to put into piles, the style used by a not a few corn knife operators. The early planted corn is showing fine, but the late needs moisture to bring it into the "good crop" class. Pastures brown, clover being cut for seed, soy beans large and green. And a big crop of rag weeds "fine medicine" for hay fever.

I believe California is one of the most sporting states in the Union. Their sense of fair play even extends to fishing. Of course if a man ain't a sportsman, he can go out here and fish with a well rope, but the fishin' club won't give him a medal or a certificate unless he catches a fish on a light line. They figger if you use a line of more than 7 pound pull, you ain't givin' the fish a fightin' chance.

Aunt Bercie was kinda disappointed when she didn't get a certificate for catchin' a three hundred pound fish. I says "What kind of line did you use?" and she said "Ordinary wrappin' twine." I says "Well, that hasn't got a pull of over 4 pounds!" And she says "I know it—but they disqualified me because I caught the fish on a bent pin!"

Adults Need Playgrounds Says Recreation Expert

SYRACUSE, N. Y. (UP) — Playground facilities should be available for adults as well as children, Miss Ethel Bowers of the National Recreation Association declared at a Syracuse institute.

Miss Bowers said playgrounds, as community centers, were becoming increasingly vital to the social stability of American urban areas.

But, she continued, the duty of playground directors does not confine itself to the playground. She pointed out that a part of the director's work was to teach people how to re-create their lives through play, off the playground.

"GET A LIFT WITH A CAMEL!"

MARSHALL WAYNE, Olympic platform diving champion, speaks decidedly for Camels. "After a strenuous competition I get a 'lift' with a Camel," he says. "And Camels sure help my digestion to hum along too."

SWIMMING RECORDS FALL before Lenore Kight Wingard. Lenore remarks: "Camels never tire my taste or get on my nerves. When I feel taut after a meet, a Camel helps ease the tension. Another thing—Camels are so mild—they never irritate my throat."

RALPH GULDAHL, twice winner of U.S. Open golf crown, says: "One thing about Camels is the 'lift' in energy they give. I've smoked Camels 10 years and I've never known them to jangle my nerves. I appreciate Camels."

DISTRIBUTING

THE great achievements of the next decade, says Governor Lehman of New York, will be in solving the problem of distribution.

This is the challenge of the present, he adds, both in agriculture and in industry. "Our very success in the field of efficient production has brought us face to face with the great problem of efficient merchandising or distribution."

It is a hard problem, complicated by the elaborate machinery and methods we have created. A good many of the present arrangements, the governor foresees, will have to be scrapped. Care must be taken, in the transition, that rights and interests created in good faith, for a system no longer adequate, will not be unduly hurt.

The change foreseen will probably take more than the decade allotted for it by the governor, but it will come. It must come, if the economic system we have known, or anything like it, is to survive. It seems absurd to think that, with our ability to produce the things needed for our modern civilized life, we can't pass them around.

EXPORTING MAGAZINES

THERE is more ado in foreign countries about American magazines. The latest to protest against the growing flood of our magazine exports is Australia.

Our friends "down under" like us, apparently, as much as usual, but find our recent magazine production strong meat for their young people. A recent shipment of 300,000 magazines, now under a customs ban which was imposed for moral reasons, has been allowed to go on sale only because it was shipped before the ban was imposed.

Many complaints have been made to the Australian Minister of Customs regarding the quality of these literary imports. The people say the magazines are not fit for their children, but the children have been buying them. They want protection in order to preserve their own standards.

To tell the truth, many Americans find some of the recent magazine crop pretty strong meat, too.

This backward flying is commoner than you'd think. An American editor points out that Eamon de Valera, while trying to fly away from England, landed right in it with that recent treaty.

The outlook is not wholly dark. Eighteen Walt Disney productions will be released in the 1938-39 movie season.

The papers seem to be reporting more broken necks than usual. No wonder, with so many fellows sticking 'em out.

World At A Glance

Charley Michelson, the Democratic national committee's press agent, surmises that party alignments in neither congressional chamber will differ materially after next November's election from what they were when congress last adjourned.

That is to say, if Charley's forecast is correct Democratically and Republicanly labeled senators and representatives will count, respectively, in the 76th congress in the 75th.

I believe that most politicians consider Charley's guessing pretty good. Republican headquarters doesn't admit it of course. The G. O. P. management professes confidence of tremendous gains. Probably the Republicans will score some, for a deal of normally Republican territory went Democratic that last three times, and a bit of a reversion to form is about due. But I doubt that the readjustment will amount to much as between the two so-called major parties. I suspect that the G. O. P. high command, in its heart of hearts, has the same idea. And Charley Michelson himself seems to recognize the possibility of a few Republican gains. He says only that he is sure the difference will not be "material."

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN.

BID OF NOTHING A MILE WON

WASHINGTON — A vigorous battle involving the question of one-millionth of a cent has been raging behind the scenes, and has involved two members of the President's family, Jimmy and Elliott.

The battle was over an airplane route between Houston and Brownsville, Texas, and the two companies bidding were Eastern Air Lines and Braniff Airways. Both wanted to be the first line flying over this important link between Mexico and the eastern United States, because lines already in operation receive preference under the new Aeronautics Authority.

Braniff therefore offered to carry U. S. mail for one-millionth of a cent per mile. Eastern Air Lines simultaneously put in a formal bid of $00.00 per mile. Before making the bid, Eastern Air Lines' astute Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, famous World War ace, had looked up precedents for zero bids and found them to be legal.

However, he reckoned without Elliott Roosevelt. Elliott lives at Fort Worth, through which Braniff Airways pass. Also Fort Worth is the home of Amon Carter, friend and sponsor of Elliott Roosevelt.

Elliott began to pull wires in Washington, got his brother Jimmy to intervene with their father. For a time it looked as if Eastern Air Lines would lose out. Finally, however, the low bid prevailed.

The millionth of a cent bid of Braniff was thrown out and the $00.00 bid of Eastern Air Lines accepted. As a result it will soon be possible to take a plane at 10 p. m. in New York, and have lunch next day in Mexico City.

BIG BROADCASTERS

Here is how the big broadcasting companies feel about the Roosevelt Administration.

When Congressman Davey Lewis, New Deal candidate against Old Deal Senator Tydings of Maryland, went on the air last week after the President's Social Security speech, the Columbia Broadcasting Company charged him regular commercial rates.

But three days later when Congressman John O'Connor of New York went on the air to answer the President, the Columbia Broadcasting Company gave him free time. O'Connor is running from only one district in New York City. Yet Columbia gave him a coast-to-coast hook-up.

NOTE — Representatives of Columbia include Paul Porter, former New Deal executive in the AAA, also Judge John Burns, former counsel of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

A NEW DEAL FIND

Thanks to Assistant Secretary Dick Patterson, things are looking up around the dissension-ridden Commerce Department.

When he took office several months ago, Washington labeled him a pleasant young man with a flair for clothes, an ingratiating social manner and not much else. Now the Capital knows better.

In the short time he has been on the job, Patterson has perked up the morale of the entire department. This is particularly true in the much battered Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, which has undergone one upheaval after another since that fateful day in July, 1933, when 453 members of its Washington staff and several hundred foreign service officers were fired.

BUT WHAT KIND

Assuming all this to be correct, it follows that the Democrats, as listed in the congressional directory, still will be in a congressional whale of a majority over the Republicans, as similarly listed.

However, it emphatically does not follow that the New Deal Democrats will be in any such whale of a majority. They may not be in a majority at all. They have been in a more than questionable majority hitherto. Anti-New Deal Democrats and Republicans have not exactly merged, but they have been something like temporary allies.

If the Republicans gain a few seats in November and if, in the current primaries, the anti-New Deal Democrats at least hold their own anti-New Dealerishness will be correspondingly strengthened on Capitol Hill.

THAT PURGE

There are signs that President Roosevelt has embittered the intra-Democratic situation by some of the things he has said lately. On his western trip he gave some pats on the back to primary candidates he favors, but he did not actually put their opponents in the pan. These opponents doubtless were miffed but not outright enraged. On his return trip through the south, however, he made some remarks that various New Dealers, even, admit they think were ill-advised.

Charley Michelson maintains that "the talk about a general 'purge' was all moonshine."

It would be hard to convince Senator Walter F. George of Georgia of that. "F. D." also implied that Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith had said a workingman could live in his state of South Carolina on a wage of 50 cents daily and "Cotton Ed" has given this statement the lie direct. This does not sound as if such senators as George, "Cotton Ed" and Millard E. Tydings of Maryland did not feel that the administration was trying to "purge" them, or that they do not resent it.

IF THEY WIN—?

If George, "Cotton Ed" and Tydings, like some others, are "purged" all will be well from the New Deal standpoint. But if they win—oh my!—what will be their attitude toward the New Deal henceforward? True, they are anti-New Dealer already. They cannot be much more so. Yet they can be uglier perhaps.

DIET AND HEALTH

What Are the Causes of Nervous Diseases?

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
WE MAY well ask "What are the factors in life which are conducive to the development of functional or nervous diseases?"

Generally speaking, diseases are either hereditary or acquired. We inherit blue eyes, brown hair, body type and weight, bald heads, big noses, and all the other physical characteristics which make people interesting. Our traits of character, however, and the stability of our nervous systems are largely a matter of contact and experience with others.

Granting this to be true, how fortunate is the child born and reared by sensible parents possessing good control of their nervous systems, and how unfortunate is the child of neurotic, hysterical or highly emotional parents.

Many children emulate their parents because knowledge is largely acquired in the early impressionable years by mimicking others. Such children are figuratively battered about between excess love and unreasonable anger; between fear and bravado; between over-solicitous attention and neglect. Even such natural functions as eating, sleeping and elimination receive an unnatural and unwarranted attention, and the child is tremendously impressed with the importance of a lost meal, a coated tongue, a scratch on the hand, a failure to respond to a call of nature when the clock strikes nine.

Develop Nerves When Adults
Then there are other people, who, even though their adolescent years were passed under favorable circumstances, develop nervous or emotional tendencies in adult life.

Many factors enter into this but they will usually fall into certain broad classifications—economic, domestic, thwarted ambition, organic disease.

The present economic disaster has brought to physicians thousands of men and women who pre-tye and weight, bald heads, big noses, and all the other physical characteristics which make people interesting. Our traits of character, however, and the stability of our nervous systems are largely a matter of contact and experience with others.

Granting this to be true, how fortunate is the child born and reared by sensible parents possessing good control of their nervous systems, and how unfortunate is the child of neurotic, hysterical or highly emotional parents.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

BEWARE THE BIG SUIT

WHENEVER the dummy has an almost solid side suit, there is great danger that the declarer may be able to discard all of his losers on it as soon as he can get the lead. Under such circumstances it is well to demonstrate why "quick tricks" got their name. Try to rake in as many high card tricks as possible for your side before he gets a chance to operate on trumps and the big suit.

After a 1-Spade bid by South, North went to 2-Clubs, South 2-Spades, North 3-Spades and South 4-Spades.

The hearts K and Q were cashed by West and, even though his partner's discards of the 3 and 7 indicated that he held one more, West decided he could do no harm by forcing South to ruff a third round of the suit.

After ruffing, South drew three rounds of trumps and on the set up clubs was able to discard two diamonds, so that his losses were limited to two hearts and one diamond.

Ordinarily the forcing of declarer to trump does no harm, but in this case, the presence of the almost set up suit should have warned West against that procedure. A switch through the diamonds was his correct defense and had he done so his side would have cashed four tricks.

CHAPTER 44

THERE WAS silence in the big, garish room after the kind looking young man had announced he hated Noel's "kind." Noel looked at him speculatively. Why do you hate my kind?" she asked at last.

The young man moved uneasily in his chair. He looked at her with a frown. "That should be plain enough. You're one of the have's and I'm a have-not."

"Is that any reason for hating me?" she asked, her breath coming a little rapidly.

"Certainly it is, when I can't even get a job," the answer came impatiently.

"Won't you believe that I'm sorry and that I would help if I could?"

The young man gave a coarse laugh. Then he said, "Stop talking. I'm not interested in you, or anything you have to say."

It seemed to Noel that his voice broke over so slightly as he said those last words. She looked at him for a moment in silence, then said, "You're a college man, aren't you?"

"It might interest you to know that I worked my way through one of the most famous colleges in the United States. When I came out, I thought the world was my oyster. What a laugh!"

he broke off again then and exclaimed: "Now, will you please stop quizzing me? I suggest that the best thing you can do is to sit down and keep yourself quiet. If you know what's good for you, that's what you'll do."

Noel followed his suggestion. She knew he intended to ignore her anyway, even though she would have liked very much to know more about this young man who said he hated her kind. She did not believe he was even one-half as unfriendly toward her as he would have her believe.

He remained sitting quietly in his chair, not moving his head. At last he drew a book from his pocket and began reading. From where she sat, Noel could see that it was a pocket edition on political philosophy.

The day seemed endless although the young man was kind enough to find some books and magazines for Noel to look over. However, when she made any further attempts at conversation, she was firmly rebuffed.

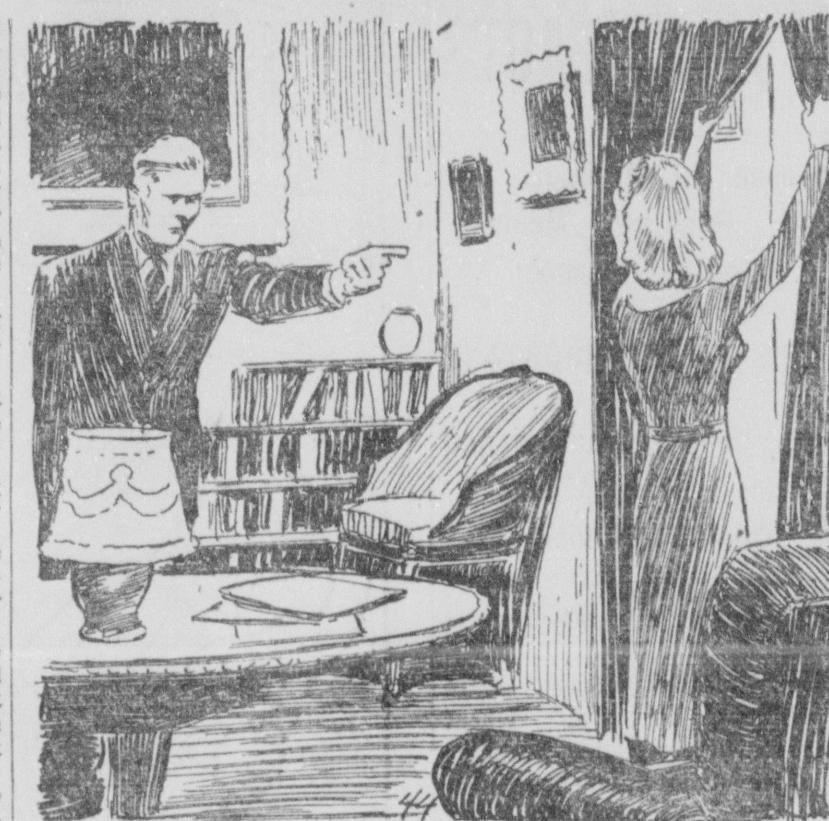

A lunch was brought up, which consisted of a sandwich. Noel could only make a pretense of eating. The room was so stuffy and she needed fresh air so badly, she was feeling a little sick. She knew it wouldn't do any good to ask for one of the windows to be opened even slightly. But she did get up and walk over to one of them again, and parted the heavy curtains once more.

"Keep away from the window!" the young man curtly commanded. Noel came back. She supposed he was afraid she might be seen. However, in this remote spot, she hardly believed there was even the barest chance.

At last it was night. Once again a tray was handed in through the door. This time there was a change. Tea, a thin soup, crackers, a potato salad. Noel tried to eat it, realizing that if by the remotest chance in the world she should see a way to escape, she would need all the strength she could summon. But the food tasted so unsavory, she had to push it from her.

The young man took the tray without question, still not looking at her. He handed it outside and returned to his seat.

Noel at last went back to the divan. Perhaps she dozed a little

"Keep away from the window!"

She had no way of knowing what time it was, but it seemed hours later when she heard the sound of hurried feet outside mingled with voices. Someone seemed to be having a scuffle.

Then the door was thrown open. Noel sat up on the couch and saw Nick, his hair tousled, and his tie twisted.

He motioned the young man to the door. "Get out!" he ordered in his tight-lipped voice. The boy obeyed.

Nick shut the door behind him, locked it. His breath was coming rapidly and it was some time before he seemed to be able to get his breath.

Noel stood there looking at him with contempt. "So it was you who did this?" She was conscious of a slight relief. She had coped with Nick before. She could do it again.

Nick merely stood there looking at her for a moment without speaking.

"Do you actually believe you can get away with a thing like this?" Noel demanded.

Nick still didn't answer. He was still looking at her.

"Nick, why did you have me brought here? I want to know. What can you hope to gain?" Noel persisted.

"You haven't any idea, have you, Miss Noel Shayne?" Nick's voice suddenly mocked.

"So you do know who I am? And you really are a racketeer, aren't you?"

"One of the best in the profession," Nick admitted boastfully. "But don't you know all men like you are doomed?" Noel exclaimed. "You can't get away with this."

"I see you read the fairy stories about the G-men," he said with a semblance of a smile.

"I tell you you won't get away with it. If you don't let me go—your're going to be sorry—mightily sorry, Nick," she emphasized.

"Hush!" Nick had one ear turned to the door as if listening for someone outside. Suddenly he said, "We've got to talk fast."

"What do you mean? If it's ransom money, I'll pay it," she said quickly.

Nick looked again toward the door, cautioned her to be quiet, then he said very low, "I suppose you would, and not even miss the money."

"Who told you my identity?"

"A girl by the name of Ruth Chester. Met her one day—knew her slightly—she volunteered the information."

"How soon will you get me away from here?" Noel asked. "I've told you money is no object."

"The money hasn't much to do with it," Nick said very low. "It's the Garwood matter. They'll take the money, however—no reason why they shouldn't."

"Please tell me what you mean," Noel begged.

"They suspect that you know more than I believe you do," Nick said. "That's why it's going to be hard for me—"

He didn't finish. He walked over on tiptoe and listened at the keyhole. Then, apparently reassured, he came back.

"I know nothing of those people," Noel began, "except that the child is not well. I was very anxious about her."

Nick held up a warning finger. "The child is in a loud voice, 'All right, Miss Shayne. If you're going to make it difficult, you'll find it to your own disadvantage. If you're willing to see reason, you won't be ill-treated.'"

A sudden firm step had sounded outside. "And the sooner you make up your mind, the better. We mean business. Will you get that into your head?" Nick's voice was still loud and emphatic.

It was plain enough now that Nick was talking for the benefit of someone outside. He kept his voice loud enough to be heard on the other side of the door.

Then he spoke again, his voice very low. "I'm not after ransom money. I'm here to get you out of this. You must listen carefully and do exactly as I say. Refuse to sign the ransom note. Keep on refusing. Stall any possible way you can. Deny that you're the right girl. Anything. Tomorrow night at midnight I'll have my plans made. Exactly at 12 o'clock, you must let yourself down from the outside of the window. I'll be there to catch you."

Then he said again loudly, "You're stubborn, aren't you?" The next minute he left the room. Noel heard him say, "She'll do it though it may take time," to someone outside the door.

Was Nick really going to help her, or was it a trick?

SEEN ALONG FIFTH AVENUE
HIGH CROWNS are definitely with us and are scheduled for honors this autumn. The small hat with high crown and manipulated brim worn at a forward tilt is exceedingly kind to almost every type of face, since it flatters the beautiful woman and makes the plain-faced one interesting and vivacious looking. The postage-stamp hats are no fad, for almost every woman will want to wear at least one model before the new season wanes. Exquisite autumn colors will delight the artistic soul, and beautiful trimming will add glamor to the hats. A lovely new model is in a rich shade of honey brown. The fabric is fur felt, and the small, round hat is trimmed with ostrich tips in deep coral, tawny brown and deep orange.

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH

WHEN BUYING peony roots for fall planting make sure you obtain healthy stock. The safest plan is to order from a reliable grower, for it takes an expert to detect signs of disease by the appearance of the peony buds. An amateur must trust to luck and the integrity of his supplier, and the latter is the best life insurance for peonies.

There is, however, one disease of peonies which shows plainly on the roots, and this is called root-gall. Small round galls make their appearance on the feeding roots, as shown in this Garden-Graph.

Peony plants suffering from root-gall send up many spindly stems which do not have the strength to bear flowers. The leaves of the plants also become curled. This is caused by a tiny cell worm. Once the ground becomes infected with these worms it is difficult to get rid of them.

For that shady place where nothing seems to grow successfully, try bleeding hearts, lily-of-the-valley

WYATT UNABLE TO JOIN BROOKS WHILE WINNING

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 22—(UP)

The strange case of a pitcher's winning efforts delaying his re-entrance into the major leagues was recorded today in the American Association.

Whitlow Wyatt, brilliant right-hander of the Milwaukee Brewers, has been sold to Brooklyn Dodgers for delivery when the club is eliminated from the battle for a place in the league's post-season play-off.

The Brewers, however, refused to drop out of the battle and their tenacity in hanging on to a first division berth is due principally to Wyatt's great hurling.

The slender mound ace hung up his 19th triumph of the campaign for the fourth place Brewers yesterday when he defeated Toledo 3 to 2 in the first game of a double-header. Toledo took the second contest 10 to 7.

In his winning effort Wyatt gave the Mudhens only seven hits and struck out nine men. He has now fanned 174 batsmen for the season.

Home runs by outfielders Malin McCulloch and Art Weis enabled the pace-setting St. Paul Saints to gain an even break in their twin bill with the Louisville Colonels.

Louisville won the opener 4 to 3 and St. Paul took the nightcap by the same count when McCulloch homered with two on in the sixth and Weis slammed out a circuit drive in the ninth.

Indianapolis and Milwaukee also divided a double-header. The Indians won the first 4 to 3 and Milwaukee the five inning finale 4 to 2.

The Columbus-Kansas City double-header was rained out.

Redlegs Back Home For Games With All Teams

CINCINNATI, Aug. 22—As the National League race reaches the far turn, the dark horse, the Cincinnati Reds, is prepared to make a great drive down the back stretch. The Reds will meet every club in the league at Crosley Field, playing 19 games with their opponents before going on the road.

This strenuous stretch that will do so much to determine where the Reds will finish in the race was to open Tuesday with the Philadelphia Phillies. The Phils were to play Tuesday and Wednesday, with the latter date being a ladies' day.

The Boston Bees will open a four game series with a double-header Thursday, and the defending champions, the New York Giants, will come to the Rhineland Sunday for two combats in as many days.

The last of the Eastern clubs, the Brooklyn Dodgers, will play a double-header on Tuesday, August 30, which will be ladies' day, and a night game Wednesday, August 31.

After two days of rest following the night game, the Reds will open hostilities with Chicago Cubs, with a twin bill September 3, and a single game September 4.

The St. Cardinals will be at Crosley Field on Labor Day, September 5 and again in a single game September 6. Then the long home stand will close in a battle with the Pittsburgh Pirates on September 7, which will be a ladies' day, and in the last night game of the season September 8.

JOHNNY ALLEN BEATEN AGAIN BY CHICAGOANS

CLEVELAND, Aug. 22—(UP)

The collapse of the Cleveland Indians parallels the pitching slump of temperamental Johnny Allen and today it was evident the Tribe was going to be merely "another club" until the star right-hander again becomes a winner.

Allen lost his fifth game in his last six starts here yesterday when he was beaten 4 to 3 by the Chicago White Sox in the opening game of a double-header. Cleveland put on a ninth inning rally to snare the second game 3 to 2.

The split dropped them 11 games back of the pace-setting New York Yankees.

Allen, who claims to have a sore arm, pitched great ball for seven innings and at the end of that stretch held a 3 to 0 lead. Then came the blow-off.

The tournament opens with the Junior and sub-junior North American clay target championships and concludes on Friday with the Grand American handicap, blue ribbon classic of the scatter-gun sport.

Sandwiched in between will be the amateur clay target championships of North American in both men's and women's classes on Tuesday; class championships and the professional shoot on Wednesday, and the difficult double target and preliminary handicap shoots on Thursday.

SUNDAY'S CHURCH OF CHRIST CROWD ESTIMATED AT 10,000 PERSONS

ALL AVAILABLE HOUSING SPACE TAKEN AT CAMP

Six Congregations Added By Council; Five Ordained At Services

Crowds estimated at 10,000 persons attended the services on the Mount of Praise, E. Ohio street, Sunday.

All available housing space at the camp was taken Saturday night and Sunday. Scores obtained rooms in Circleville homes. Many unable to find rooms spent Saturday night in cars and trucks on the grounds.

A count of cars at 2 p. m. showed 1,400 on the grounds. This count did not include hundreds of autos parked in all available space on streets near the Mount of Praise. Officials estimated about 8,000 persons were in the camp Sunday morning. Throughout the day there were groups arriving and departing. It was estimated that about 2,500 persons were housed on the grounds Saturday night in the dormitories and cottages. Many are living in tents and trailers during the entire session.

Tabernacle Crowded Despite the enlargement of the tabernacle this year from a seating capacity of 2,000 to 3,000 persons, the huge building was filled for every service and many persons had to stand on the outside. An improved address system this year makes it possible for those on the outside to hear the services. The Sunday services were conducted by the three camp evangelists, the Revs. T. M. Anderson, E. H. Stillion and Charles L. Slater. Special music was furnished by a chorus of 21 girls from the Lancaster church and a quartet from the Cleveland Bible school.

Six new churches were added to the Council of the Churches of Christ in Christian Union of Ohio in the Sunday morning service. They are Urbana, Bainbridge, Peace Chapel near Delaware, Pleasant Ridge near Laurelville, Spring Hill near Quincy, and Lucasville near Portsmouth.

Five men, one a Pickaway countian, were ordained to the ministry. Bruce Seymour, Kings-ton pike, a member of the Circleville church, was admitted to the ministry. Others were Willard Appleman, Vinton county; Ross Haysley, Adams county; William Argenbrite and Charles Thompson, both of Columbus.

Anniversary Program Friday will be anniversary day at the camp. So far the anniversary program has not been completed. This year marks the 20th anniversary of the camp, started in 1918. Visitors will be asked to contribute 20 cents each. The funds will be used to meet the cost of improvements on the grounds this year.

Missionary Day will be next Saturday. Returned missionaries will participate in the service. Throughout the week the following schedule will be followed daily: 6 a. m. rising bell; 7, prayer and praise service; 8, missionary service; 9, breakfast; 10:30, song service; and 11, preaching; 1 p. m., bell taps for prayer and children's meeting; 2, song service; 2:30, preaching; 4, dinner; 5, bell taps for prayer; 6, young people's meeting and platform service; 7:30, song service; and 8:15, evangelistic service.

FOG BLAMED FOR 'FIRE'
Firemen were called out of bed at midnight Sunday when a resident telephoned the department and reported that it looked like a fire on Franklin street. Members of the department could find no flames. They believed the lights of the city reflecting in the heavy fog made it look like a fire.

TYDINGS FLAYS ROOSEVELT FOR INVADING STATE

Senator, Branded As New Deal foe, Claims F. D. "Carpet-Bagging"

himself to become exercised to the point of frenzy; that he had "turned" against the New Deal after unsuccessfully "lobbying" for a Baltimore scrap metal firm whose purchase of 124 obsolete ships had been held up by the Department of Commerce.
In his address, which he described as an answer to recent events, Tydings said that Mr. Roosevelt "has invaded Maryland through the press," adding:
"Now it is reported that he will invade Maryland in person to carry on this war against me."
"I believe the day will come when President Roosevelt will realize that neither he, nor any other executive, federal or state, should attempt to destroy the independence and usefulness of the other branches of the government."

It has been reported that the President will speak in Baltimore Labor Day in behalf of Lewis, but this has not been confirmed by the President.

Lewis Attacked

Continuing his denunciation of "outsiders," Tydings charged that Lewis had "agreed to permit himself to be used as the instrument of persons who do not live in Maryland; who cannot vote in Maryland; who pay no taxes in Maryland; who have no homes in Maryland, but who are determined to dictate the policies of Maryland."

If Lewis is elected, "his vote on any and all questions will be the property of the President of the United States," he said, and:
"It is, I think, entirely fair to say that he has pledged himself, in advance, not to advocate or vote for the views or the wishes of the people of Maryland... but to vote solely and only for legislation and policies that may be proposed by the chief executive, no matter what may be their import or character."

Describing Mr. Roosevelt as "the most powerful man in the world," he challenged the President's right to name his preference among candidates in a state primary.
"The Constitution confers no such right on him," he continued. "By the plainest implication it forbids such intervention. By its terms he is required to advise the congress from time to time the state of the nation and to recommend such legislation as he may deem to be beneficial to the country, this is the limit of the President's authority."

The voters of Maryland "are facing the loss of our right to be represented in the federal congress by representatives of our own selection," he said, and if he and other members opposed by the president are defeated, he predicted that the supreme court organization fight would be renewed.

Support Recalled

To these charges Lewis replied that Tydings had forgotten that the "sovereign voice of Maryland" had spoken in 1932 and 1936 and was overwhelmingly in favor and accord with Mr. Roosevelt.
"Mr. Tydings forgets," he added, "that nearly 400,000 Marylanders voted for the President in 1936—voting for him as a friend and President, not as an alien or an invader..."

"If there is anyone who has ignored that sovereign voice of Maryland, it is Millard E. Tydings."
"Mr. Tydings, when having been elected in a Democratic landslide on Mr. Roosevelt's coat tails, has voted against 22 important Roosevelt measures..."

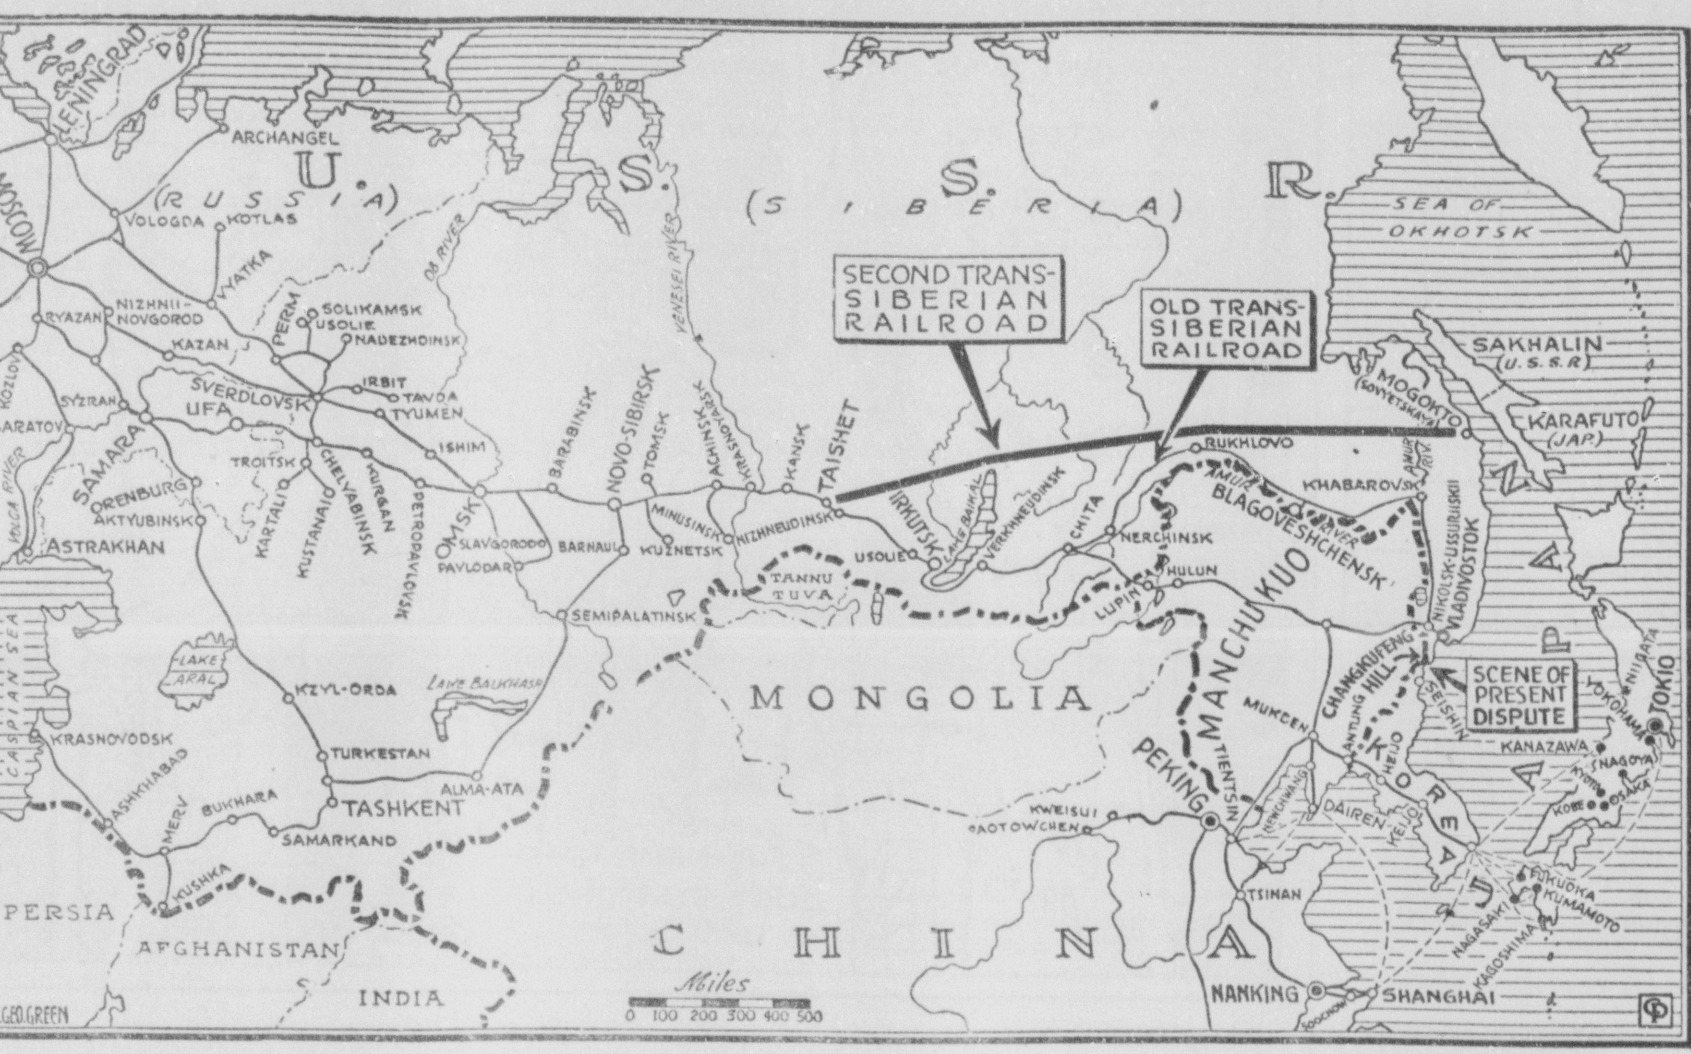

He linked Tydings with the sale of 124 government ships in 1932 to the Boston Iron & Metal company, Baltimore. When the Roosevelt administration took office, Lewis said, Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper held up the sale of these ships until the navy department could be consulted. Forty-five were found to be needed by the government, he said, and others were sold to the company.

"This," he added, "brought a storm of protest from Mr. Tydings. He became the crusading champion of the Boston Iron & Metal Co.—why, I don't know."

"It made no difference to him (Tydings) that the first decision to sell the ships dated back to another Republican administration notorious for corruption and for favoring big business... he had been asked by a big corporation to act and he demanded action. He was not representing the people of Maryland."

"Life Lines" for Russia, Japan, in Far Eastern Border Dispute

THIS map shows the lines of communications and ship ports of the Soviet Union and Japan in the Far Eastern border warfare. The map shows Russia's second great trans-Siberian railroad—giving a second connecting link from European Russia. But Siberia is said not to depend so much on supplies from European Russia any more, as Siberia has its own self-contained plants and resources now. Japan is dependent on Korea, Manchukuo and north China for natural resources.

TEXAS OUTLAW WANTS TO DIE AS BROTHER DID

DALLAS, Tex., Aug. 22—(UP)—Outlaw Floyd Hamilton said today that he wanted to end his life the same way his notorious brother Raymond did—in the electric chair.

He was through, he said, tired of living, preferred the chair to a long prison term. The outlaw whose name had topped the list of those sought by the Department of Justice and whose reputation had come to equal those of many of his predecessors in southwestern banditry, Clyde Barrow, "Pretty Boy" Floyd and Raymond Hamilton, was weak, passive and defeated.

Police said they would co-operate with Hamilton.
"We expect to file seven or more robbery charges against him," Inspector Will Fritz said. "The death sentence seldom is given for robbery in Texas, but under the law it can be."

Hamilton and his pal, Ted Walters, since their escape from the Montague county jail in March, have been accused of scores of robberies, kidnappings, shootings. How many they committed probably never will be established. But they couldn't have been guilty of them all because of the physical impossibility of being two or three places at one time.

But there were several where the cases against them were strong. They probably will be charged and tried in Texas, although they have been accused in Louisiana, Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri, Arkansas and Illinois.
Today a steady stream of robbery victims filed into the jail.

others were sold to the company.

"This," he added, "brought a storm of protest from Mr. Tydings. He became the crusading champion of the Boston Iron & Metal Co.—why, I don't know."

"It made no difference to him (Tydings) that the first decision to sell the ships dated back to another Republican administration notorious for corruption and for favoring big business... he had been asked by a big corporation to act and he demanded action. EMBEZZLEMENT CHARGE LODGES MAN IN JAIL

William Steen, 23, of Portland, Me., was returned from West Union, Adams county, by police Saturday to answer a charge of embezzlement filed by J. Earl White, Chattanooga, Tenn. Steen is accused of taking a sample case valued at $18, 10 photographs valued at $3 each and $12 in cash from his employer. Police said the men were in a crew selling photographs.

Steen denied the charge and was bound to the grand jury under $1,000 bond. He was unable to furnish bond and was sent to the county jail by Mayor W. B. Cady. The alleged embezzlement took place in Circleville.

BURGLARS FLEE AFTER LOOTING SAFE IN AMANDA

Two Amanda business places were burglarized Saturday. A safe door at the Huston Grain Co. office was blasted and $1240 taken. The burglars fled from the C. G. Johnson & Son's general store when they set off an alarm.
The thieves took $1,400 in notes from the grain company safe. These were discarded at the edge of town.
Inspection of the safe by the Fairfield county sheriff's department showed that it was the work of experts. The burglars used just enough nitro-glycerine to blow off the door without disturbing anything else in the office. They left no fingerprints.

LEE REYNOLDS ARRESTED FOR SWEET CORN THEFT

Lee Reynolds, 41, W. Corwin street, was arrested by police Saturday night for the sheriff's department on a charge that he was the companion of Willard Reed, E. Union street, in the theft last month of seven sacks of sweet corn from P. W. Smallwood, who resides just west of Circleville.
Reed was fined $200 and costs on July 26 and sentenced to jail for 60 days. The charge against Reynolds was filed by Willard Reed, Sr. Reynolds is awaiting a hearing.

JAILED FOR COLUMBUS

SHERIFF STUDIES AX HANDLE FOR CLUE TO DEATH

AKRON, Aug. 22—(UP)—Summit county Sheriff Walter P. O'Neil today examined a bloody ax handle and a pocket knife as clues in the mysterious death of Richard Williams, 57.
Williams was found dead in a lonely cottage near Twinsburg. Acting Coroner K. H. Harrington said death was due to "concussion of the brain due to external violence."
Williams' death was the second one to occur at the lonely cottage in the last six months. Last March the body of Oscar Makila, 65, a friend of Williams', was found mutilated.

VETERANS HEAR PLEA FOR SPEECH FREEDOM'S NEED

COLUMBUS, Aug. 22—(UP)—Maintenance of popular, democratic government rests on freedom of speech and resistance to all attempts at its suppression. Herbert Bayard Swope, New York, retired editor, publicist and writer, said today in an address before the national encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.
Swope participated in a symposium on "the basic principles of democracy" sponsored by the veterans' organization, and including a consideration also of the right of petition, freedom of the press, freedom of assembly and religious freedom.

MARTIN SEES PROSPERITY AND CONTRACT WITH FORD

CLEVELAND, Aug. 22—(UP)—Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers union, predicted today that the automobile business would improve during the next year and that Henry Ford would sign a contract with the U. A. W. during the 1939 production season.
He told delegates at a regional union meeting that although 80 percent of the workers in the automobile industry had been idle during the recent slump, "3,000 Ford workers have been reinstated with back pay and a new local has been set up at the Ford plant at Detroit, which is a strong local right now."

Private employment in Washington, D. C., has increased more than 50 per cent during the last five years.

DIES COMMITTEE HEARS STORY OF EX-COMMUNIST

work of Harry Bridges in the shipping industry on the West coast.
Matthews charged the Communists were attempting to bore into the nation's armed forces, to encourage military insurrection in event of war against the Soviet Union.

At one meeting of the United States Congress Against War, Matthews said, a fully-uniformed soldier appeared on the platform. "Those were the days before the Communist party had donned the mask of 100 percent patriotism," he said. "Earl Browder had made the most careful plans for the soldier to appear as a symbol of the insurrectionary 'faction' of the Communist party within the army. Flying squadrons were placed in readiness to block all aisles of the hall in the event of an attempted arrest of the soldier by secret service men."

"Other committees of comrades were deputized to take care of all news photographers with instructions to smash their cameras if they insisted on making pictures of the soldier," Matthews said.
Reported to Moscow
Browder reported to the executive committee of the Communist Internationale in Moscow that a delegate from the American army had appeared at the meeting, he said.
